transfer of technology and the protection of intellectual property,” the press service said.

The parties will discuss the order of selecting joint sci-tech projects for the competition and the list of priority areas of sci-tech cooperation. “Among the priority areas for cooperation in 2016-2017 are the following: energy, microelectronics, IT, nano and biotechnology, medicine and pharmacy, agro-technology, optoelectronics, new materials, unmanned aircraft systems, earth remote sensing,” the committee said.

During the meeting the parties approved procedures and regulations, and signed the sci-tech and innovative cooperation program for 2016-2017.

The Belarusian part of the working group is led by Deputy Chairman of the State Science and Technology Committee Piotr Baltrukovich. The Hungarian part of the group is headed by Deputy Chairman of the National Research, Development and Innovation Office Endre Spaller.
